London, October 29.

Yesterday arriv'd a Mail from Holland.

From the Amst. Courant, dated Nov. 3.

Genoa, October 17.

THE Officers who are come hither from Cagliari report, That the Breach made before the Capitulation was demanded, was so large, that a Man on Horseback might easily ride thro'; That the Artillery of the Place were dismounted, and that the Enemy fired incessantly with 40 Cannon; That the Garrison consisted of but 400 Men, whereof the Spaniards drew off one half as they march'd out, partly by Money and Promises, and partly by Force; and that the Marquis de Rubi withdrew out of the Place the Night before, to avoid being oblig'd to Capitate for the whole Kingdom of Sardinia; but that there still remained in the Place 200 Barrels of Gunpowder, and Provisions for three Months. The Marquis retired to Alguer, where he has 200 Regular Soldiers, and 36 Pieces of Cannon. They further say, that the Marquis de Lede having put three Battalions into Cagliari, was march'd with 3000 Men towards Alguer, to attack that Place, and that his Artillery was to be convey'd thither by Sea. Whether the Regiment of Hamilton be still at Corsica, or arriv'd in Sardinia, is not yet known, nor whether the last Succours sent from Naples be arriv'd there. To Morrow the 200 Men brought hither from Cagliari will march to Tortona. The Capitulation for Cagliari, as demanded by Colonel Don Jacomo Carrera, who commanded in the Absence of the Marquis de Rubi, was as follows.

With Respect to the sick and wounded Officers and Soldiers, it is agreed, That Surgeons and Physicians shall be allowed them at their own Expence. The rest refused, except that the Surgeons and Physicians that stay behind to attend them, shall have Passports to go where they please.
